Our Advocates for LGS are Headed to Capitol Hill

Coming together and sharing our voices is a powerful tool in bringing about the change we want to see.

During Rare Disease Week, our Advocates for LGS are headed to Capitol Hill to make their voices heard to their Members of Congress.

There they will amplify the voices of the LGS Community to make both lawmakers understand LGS as they provide their work. The more people who know about LGS, the more it can be studied. And the more we share what it is like to live with LGS, the more Congress can prioritize research and resources for our community.

If you would like to become an Advocate for LGS, please go here for more info.

Even a phone call or letter to your Congressman can tip the balance towards change, join us as we seek to end the devastation and suffering caused by LGS.
